

Thomas-Kilmann Conflict Style Questionnaire

On the following pages are several pairs of statements describing possible behavioural responses to a conflict situation. For each pair, circle the "A" or "B" statement which is most characteristic of your own behaviour.

You may find that neither of the "A" or "B" statements is typical of your behaviour; and if this is so, please select the response which you would be more likely to use.

Thomas-Kilmann Conflict Style Background

Ref: From Thomas-Kilmann – Conflict Mode Instrument

The questionnaire is designed to assess your behaviour in conflict situations, where a situation arises and at least two people appear to be incompatible. In such situations, we can describe a person's behaviour along two basic dimensions: (1) Assertiveness, the extent to which the individual attempts to satisfy his/her own concerns, and (2) Cooperativeness, the extent to which the individual attempts to satisfy the other person's concerns. These two basic dimensions of behaviour can be used to define five specific methods of dealing with conflicts, as shown on the grid below:

You will have a numerical score for each of the five conflict mode styles, competing, avoiding, accommodating, collaborating and compromising. Your highest scoring column represents the conflict style mode that is your 'default or natural' mode.

Each of the five columns has a range of possible scores from 0 (for very low use) to 12 (for very high use). These have been averaged out on a distribution curve against other manager responses. Check your range of scores against the following key to identify how they compare in relation to other managers in your business sector.

Usage	Competing	Collaborating	Compromising	Avoiding	Accommodating
High	8 to 12	9 to 12	9 to 12	8 to 12	7 to 12
Average	4 to 7	6 to 8	5 to 8	5 to 7	3 to 6
Low	0 to 3	0 to 5	0 to 4	0 to 4	0 to 2

Five Conflict Mode Descriptions

Read the descriptions below for each of the five different conflict modes taking particular note of your highest conflict style.

COMPETING - Is assertive and uncooperative - an individual pursues their own concerns at the other person's expense. This is a power-oriented mode, in which one uses whatever power seems appropriate to win one's own position - one's ability to argue, one's rank, economic sanctions. Competing might mean "standing up for your rights," defending a position which you believe is correct, or simply trying to win.

ACCOMMODATING - Is unassertive and cooperative - the opposite of competing. When accommodating, an individual neglects their own concerns to satisfy the concerns of the other person; there is an element of self-sacrifice in this mode. Accommodating might take the form of selfless generosity or charity, obeying another person's order when one would prefer not to, or yielding to another's point of view.

AVOIDING - Is unassertive and uncooperative - the individual does not immediately pursue their own concerns of those of the other person. They do not address the conflict. Avoiding might take the form of diplomatically side-stepping an issue, postponing an issue until a better time, or simply withdrawing from a threatening situation.

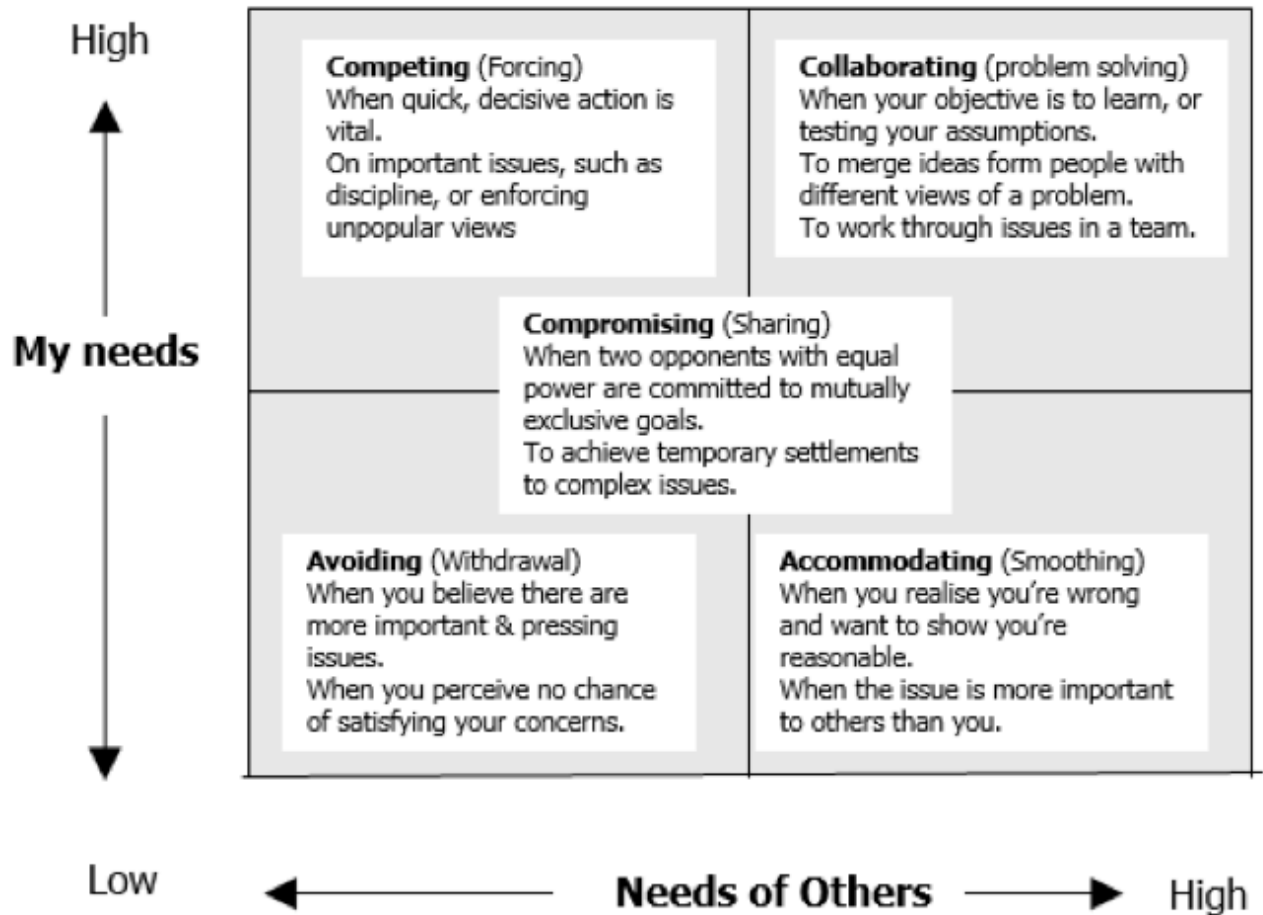

COLLABORATING - Is both assertive and cooperative - the opposite of avoiding. Collaborating involves an attempt to work with the other person to find some solution which fully satisfies the concerns of both persons. It means digging into an issue to identify the underlying concerns of the two individuals and to find an alternative which meets both sets of concerns. Collaborating between two persons might take the form of exploring a disagreement to learn from each other's insights, concluding to resolve some condition which would otherwise have them competing for resources, or confronting and trying to find a creative solution to an interpersonal problem.

COMPROMISING - Is intermediate in both assertiveness and cooperativeness. The objective is to find some expedient, mutually acceptable solution which partially satisfies both parties. It falls on a middle ground between competing and accommodating. Compromising gives up more than competing but less than accommodating. Likewise, it addresses an issue more directly than avoiding, but does not explore it in as much depth as collaborating. Compromising might mean splitting the difference, exchanging concessions, or seeking a quick middle-ground position.

Appropriate Use of Conflict Modes

Each of the five conflict modes has its strengths and weaknesses, depending upon the conflict situation you are in. To maximise your ability to influence and manage conflict it is important to know how to adapt your style according to the situation you find yourself in.

The following chart depicts some examples of conflict situations, and suggests the most appropriate conflict mode to use for that situation.

Action

Think about the conflict situations you have experienced at work, and how you handled them. What worked well for you and what might you need to change or develop?
